

THE 5-MINUTE WEBSITE CLARITY AUDIT

Your website has one job before it has any others: make sense.

Open your website on your computer.

Don't edit anything. Don't explain anything. And try to forget everything you already know about your business.

You're the customer now.

Ready?

01 — THE 5-SECOND TEST

Look at your homepage. Don't scroll.

Give yourself five seconds.

Then answer:

Can I tell what this business actually does?

☐ YES ☐ KIND OF ☐ NO

Can I tell who it's for?

☐ YES ☐ KIND OF ☐ NO

Is it obvious what I should do next?

☐ YES ☐ KIND OF ☐ NO

Here's the rule:

Your customer shouldn't have to piece together your headline, navigation, Instagram bio, and About page to understand what you sell.

Clarity beats clever.

Now you can scroll.

Give yourself 30 seconds to find the answers to these questions.

What is the primary thing this business sells?

☐ OBVIOUS ☐ I HAD TO LOOK ☐ I STILL DON'T KNOW

Why should I trust this business?

Can you quickly find reviews, results, examples, credentials, testimonials, past work, recognizable clients, or some other reason to believe?

☐ YES ☐ SORT OF ☐ NO

How do I actually become a customer?

Can you easily figure out how to:

buy • book • inquire • schedule • contact

☐ YES ☐ I HAD TO LOOK ☐ NO

If someone wants to give you money...
don't make them go looking for the button.

03 — THE MOBILE TEST

Now pull out your phone.

Don't skip this part.

Open the same homepage on mobile and actually use it.

Is anything annoying?

Think tiny buttons, pop-ups, slow images, weird spacing, giant blocks of text, menus that are difficult to use.

☐ NO ☐ A LITTLE ☐ YES

Is anything confusing?

☐ NO ☐ A LITTLE ☐ YES

Is the primary CTA still obvious?

☐ YES ☐ KIND OF ☐ NO

Can you comfortably complete the main action with your thumb?

☐ YES ☐ KIND OF ☐ NO

Your mobile website isn't the smaller version of your website.
For a lot of your customers, it is your website.

04 — THE STRANGER TEST

This is the one that matters most.

Send your homepage to someone who doesn't know your business well.

Don't give them any context.

Tell them to look at it for five seconds.

Then have them close it.

Ask:

“What do you think we do?”

Write their answer exactly as they say it:

Then ask:

“What do you think I wanted you to do next?”

Their answer:

Don't correct them.

Don't explain what you meant.

Their confusion is the result.

HOW CLEAR IS YOUR WEBSITE?

Go back through the audit.

Give yourself:

2 points for every clear YES / OBVIOUS / NO PROBLEM

1 point for every KIND OF / SORT OF / A LITTLE / HAD TO LOOK

0 points for every NO / CONFUSING / STILL DON'T KNOW

17–20 POINTS

Your website is doing its job.

People can understand what you do, decide whether it's for them, and figure out what to do next.

Now look for opportunities to make the experience even easier.

11–16 POINTS

You're making people work a little too hard.

The pieces are there, but something isn't immediately connecting.

Look at every answer that earned 0 or 1 point.

Those are your opportunities.

0–10 POINTS

Your website might look good without working well.

Before you redesign it, add another page, rewrite everything, or buy another template:

fix the path.

Make these three things unmistakably clear:

What do you do?

Who is it for?

What should I do next?

Start there.

ONE LAST QUESTION

Your website doesn't exist for you.

It exists for the person who doesn't know what you know.

So ask yourself:

Where am I expecting my customer to already understand my business?

That's usually where the friction starts.

Your website is only one piece.
